

Scrapbooking Theme – Mail/Letters

Description

Before the advancement in technology, we used to get overly excited whenever we receive letters via postal mail. Those days are long gone but anyone who had experienced that thing can probably agree that it was something special and very unique. Imagine having to read beautifully handwritten messages from the people you love and care about. Isn't it wonderful to know somebody remembered you and took the time to write and send you a letter?

Unlike emails and text messages which you can receive in an instant, snail mails take some time to get to you. Typically, it can take 1 to 4 days or even a whole week depending on the location and circumstances. Yes, you might have to wait for days but that's part of the thrill!

Do you like writing letters? Do you still have a collection of handwritten mails from your family, friends, or someone special? Then, take a look at these layouts we featured here so you can get some ideas on how to put them in the spotlight for your next scrapbooking project.

Love Letters

We're pretty sure some of you still kept a pile of letters from your partners or past lovers. Well, we couldn't blame you as these little things held some important and precious memories of your life. It would be amazing to look back and even share the stories behind those letters with your children or friend

54 letters

While looking for something else under our bed, I found a box of letters. There are 54 letters, notes, cards and postcards, from me to you, from 1992 - 1994. I was at uni in London and you were at home in Poole. We had already been dating a while by this point, and were definately "together". These were your pre-mission years! We spoke together on the phone most days, but there is a thrill like no other, in getting a letter through the post. It was another way to show we cared I guess. These days, we complain about how people are addicted to their phone, and I think that it true, but it looks like we were pretty addicted to communicating as best we could before mobile phones were so common. I think I knew that you had kept all these letters, just like I know you kept all the letters I wrote to you on your mission (and I kept all your letters and tapes too). Sadly these are in a box that at some point has got damp, so there are mouldy bits throughout the pile, and colourful ink has bled through many envelopes, so future generations will probably never be able to appreciate my neat hand-writing!

Thank You Letters

At some point in our lives, we have met a person or two that truly inspired and moved us. Those particular people deserve some appreciation. Some give them gifts but a simple thank you letter to show your sincere gratitude also works like magic!

Have you ever written a thank you letter before? Or did you ever receive one, perhaps?

Dear Mrs. Lovette,

9-27-19

thank you grama for coming on our field trip. I loved that you could help
us. It was so fun.
Thank you for coming.
I'm so thankful
that you could come.

Letters from Home

There are times when we are far away from home and couldn't easily communicate with our family, friends, or relatives. We wonder how they are and what they've been doing. So to keep in touch with them, people back in the old days usually send letters to each other and sometimes included pictures along with them.

Letter to Self

Aside from writing letters to someone else, there are also instances when we want to create one for ourselves. If you're doing that to cheer yourself and keep you motivated, you are not alone! We also need to appreciate ourselves and add our own names to our long list of priorities.

making mistakes is better than faking perfection

Nobody's perfect, have the courage to take chances, give yourself and those around you a lot of grace, it's okay to fail, have faith in the talents and abilities God gave you... All lessons I wish I had learned much earlier in life. Shoot, I'm still trying to learn them! I try really hard to be kind to myself, and not beat myself up, but it's really hard sometimes. I have a lot of regrets piled up about things I didn't have the courage to do. I work remind myself daily that nobody's perfect, and I don't have to be either.
