Description

Were your childhood trips included those to the farm? Maybe your family owns a farm, or you love to visit one that has a lot of animals. Which farm animal was your favorite? Do you take your kids to farm trips too?

Whether you are a frequent visitor or you live on a farm, the animals and crops are definitely interesting inspirations for scrapbook pages, digital or not.

The following are awesome pages that will give you more ideas for your next layouts:

Horses

Where did you first ride a horse? I bet it was on a farm! Though most horses are farm pets, they are also hard working farm animals. Farmers ride horses to herd sheep and cattle. When farm terrain is especially rocky or hilly, horses are usually the main mode of transport for farmers.

Chickens

What is a farm without these feathered residents? Chickens are raised for both their meat and eggs. Those that are raised mainly for their meat are known as broilers, and those for their eggs are layers. Some chickens are raised in barns, others are allowed to roam around the farm and are called free-range chickens.

Cows

Cows are grown and raised mainly for meat and milk, but there are cattle farms that also produce leather and manure for fertilizer and fuel. Have you tried milking a cow? That's one for the books, for sure!

Pigs

Pigs are raised for their meat, but some farms allow pigs to roam free and convert the soil to rich land with their rooting behaviour. And of course, some farms have pet pigs that will never take a trip to the butcher!

I don't know what it is about this pig that you boys find so fascinating. To be honest I makes me nervous when you insist upon petting him. I've never actually seen him get up and move about and has a chubby one that's for certain. Maybe it's just that I can tell he loves to eat and might decide you are next on the menu.

Goats

Goats keep the farm from being overgrown with grass and weeds. Aside from being the farm's natural grass-cutter, goats can also be sold for their meat, milk, and wool. The cute little kids (the young goats, not THE kids) are also great for petting.

Farm Life

Ah, life on the farm. It's not for everyone, and it's not for the fainthearted either. It's for people who love animals. Those who love to work with their hands and wouldn't mind being under the sun on the fields.
